Short-Term Studies Programme

English and/or German courses

The Short-Term Studies programme is intended primarily for students who are (or have been) studying theology or a related subject at a university or institute of higher education in their own country and who wish to come and study at the Faculty for a year or a semester before returning to complete their studies at home. Knowledge of Czech is not necessary, because students can choose from a range of courses taught in English and a few in German.

Students with a sufficient knowledge of Czech can also attend any of the courses we offer that are taught in Czech, but it is normally expected that all short-term studies students attend at least one course per semester in English or German. For a list of the courses available, please see the web site. The faculty organizes an orientation programme for international students; optional Czech language courses will be offered as well (for the Czech language courses a fee are charged). The short-term studies program does not lead to the award of any diploma or degree, but students are issued with a transcript of records showing the courses they have successfully completed, and the number of ECTS credits awarded, which will usually be recognized by their home university.

How to apply

Fill out the application form (available on the web site) and send it to the Office for International Relations, together with confirmation that you are or have been studying theology or a related subject at university level (e.g. confirmation of matriculation or copy of your diploma).

- Program Fee: The Faculty does not charge tuition fee for this program. However, students have to provide for their living expenses.
- Application deadline: For study purposes, applications should normally be sent by 31 July 2012 (for the winter semester), by 15 December 2012 (for the summer semester), but if you need a visa you will have to apply earlier.

The Czech Legal System in European Context (CLS)

The program of study The Czech Legal System in European Context (CLS) has been designed with the following goals in mind:

- to introduce a foreign student to the fundamentals of the Czech law, not only from an analytical perspective, but also in larger historical, political, social-economic, environmental and regional contexts;
- to familiarize students with the dramatic reforms which the Czech law, as well as the laws of other Central and Eastern European Countries (CEECs), has faced since the fall of communism in 1989;
- to analyze the close links between economic and social transformation and legal change;
- to describe how the law in transition works, focusing on the available remedies of law enforcement;
- to explain the procedure of, and prospects for, law approximation which accompanies the integration of the Czech Republic and other CEECs within the EU law.

The CLS Program is a nine-month program done on a full-time basis. Limited admission guarantees that each student receives optimal attention and has every opportunity to participate actively in the class. Students will obtain at the end an official transcript of records for their home university.

Program Structure:

The Program is composed of 18 courses. All courses are taught in English. Instruction is a combination of lectures and seminars. Participants are required to attend all classes in which they have been enrolled and an adequate preparation is expected from each student as well. There is an obligatory reading load of between 100-200 pages per course. Background materials (lecture notes, statutory and treaty provisions, cases and other relevant legal texts) are distributed to all participants, or are available in the faculty library.

Courses are taught by distinguished academics from the Charles University in Prague and some other European universities, as well as judges and leading lawyers. There are two groups of courses – general courses and courses of specialization which aim at giving students an insight into and an understanding of the complexity of the Czech legal system in its regional and broader European contexts.

Participants of the eight general courses meet for a total of 24 hours of each; the ten courses of specialization have duration from between 20 and 24 hours each. Student performance is evaluated in each course and credits are awarded on the basis of contact hours and classes successfully completed. The total credit requirement is 60 credits, of which 48 credits in general courses and a minimum of 12 credits in special courses must be obtained. Course attendance (lectures and tutorials) amounts to approximately a half of the workload, the other part consists of home preparation and background reading. Exams are both in written and oral forms.

Courses of the Czech language for beginners, as well as for advanced students, are offered free of charge.

Students are responsible for financing their living expenses while staying in Prague.

Admission requirements:

Candidates might be both undergraduate and postgraduate students. In the case of undergraduates, students having intermediate and upper intermediate law knowledge are preferred. Non-native speakers are obliged to submit a proof of their oral and written proficiency in English by sending a certification from a university or a recognized language school (TOEFL, CAE, CPE) verifying the candidates linguistic competence.

All candidates will be considered on the basis of their completed application form and accompanying documents, including a detailed curriculum vitae, a cover letter explaining the candidates professional goals, expectations concerning the Program and his/her personal interests in the relevant field of studies, a letter of recommendation from an academician or a respected personality as well as a declaration of the means of financing the study in Prague.

- Program fee: USD 4,500,- (USD 2,250,- per semester) includes the teaching materials.
- Application deadline: October 31 2012 for summer (spring) semester
June 15 2012 for winter (autumn) semester

Short Study Visit Programme

The Short Study Visit Programme is essentially designed to give international students an opportunity to visit the Faculty on an informal basis. Short Study Visits are currently available at all five of the Faculty's institutes, and in all subjects offered. Visits may be arranged for any length of time from a minimum of four weeks to a maximum of two semesters, according to the applicant's own preferences. Although the bulk of the Faculty's teaching is conducted in Czech, some of our courses are taught in English/French/German.

The criteria for admission as a visiting student are less strict than those for admission to a full-time course of study. However, you should note that a visiting student cannot under any circumstances end their studies at the Faculty of Social Sciences by being awarded a degree. Visiting student status is thus most suitable for students who are already enrolled at a different university abroad, and who wish to familiarize themselves with conditions in the Czech Republic. A proven ability to study in the Czech language is not always a condition of entry for visiting students; however, it would be an advantage, and admission to certain subjects (especially Journalism) may be restricted on the grounds of language ability.

As part of our Short Study Visit programme is offer the following:

- The right to register for any classes normally offered by the Faculty, up to a total of 30 ECTS credits per semester, and to receive credit for those classes on completion of the necessary curricular requirements.
- Subject to the availability of space, the possibility to attend any further classes which attract the student's interest.
- The provision of personal consultations by an academic supervisor.
- The opportunity to prepare of a piece of written work on a specific topic set by the student's consultant, which will be assessed by a committee of independent examiners, and attested by a certificate from Charles University.
- In cases where the student's visit lasts at least one full semester, they will also on request be issued with a transcript.

For details of classes currently on offer in English/French/German, please see the web site.

When a visit lasts less than a whole semester, only a fraction of the fee is payable. Please note that these prices apply only to the programme of Short Study Visits at the Faculty of Social Sciences, and that they cover only the cost of tuition and examinations. Students are responsible for paying their own living expenses (food, lodging, etc.) Although we do not have any immediate plans to raise school fees, we reserve the right to increase prices in future, in response to rising overheads.

Programme fee: 2,500 Euro per semester

CENTER FOR ECONOMIC RESEARCH AND GRADUATE EDUCATION (CERGE- EI) AND FACULTY OF HUMANITIES (FHS)

CERGE-EI, Undergraduate Program in Central European Studies (UPCES); Office of International Academic Programs; Address: Politických vězňů 7, 110 00 Prague 1, Czech Republic; Tel: + 420 224 005 201; + 420 224 005 133; +420 224 005 208; Fax: +420 224 005 225; Email: upces@cerge-ei.cz or Nicki.Norris@cerge-ei.cz; Website: <http://www.upces.cerge-ei.cz>

The Undergraduate Program in Central European Studies (UPCES)

UPCES was launched in 2001 with the intention of being the most distinguished undergraduate academic program of its kind in Central Europe. While there are many study-abroad programs based in Prague and other Central European capitals, few concentrate on giving students the real opportunity to become immersed in a foreign culture as much as UPCES does. UPCES students study with other exceptional students from throughout Europe, are introduced to a demanding Slavic language, and gain direct entrée into the most important academic and cultural institutions in the Czech Republic.

Students from a wide variety of majors and interests enjoy what UPCES has to offer. Those pursuing degrees in the Social Sciences and Economics with a keen interest in the economic, political, and sociological transition to democracy in the region will especially benefit. The Undergraduate Program in Central European Studies offers a one-semester or full academic year program. UPCES students have a unique opportunity to interact with students from other departments of Charles University. Alone among study abroad programs in Prague, UPCES courses are cross-listed through the university's School of Humanities, so classes contain a mix of Czech, Western European, and North American students. A typical UPCES seminar with a dozen participants has students from several nations, ensuring that our students take their courses in an international, multi-cultural environment.

The UPCES Academic Advisory Committee has developed courses for the program that best exemplify its goals and objectives. Students are required to take five courses, including mandatory Czech language. Students may select from the following courses:

If a student is interested in a specific course that is not being offered during the semester, it is also possible to arrange for an independent study course. The student's home institution must also approve an independent study course to allow for credit transfer. Students are asked to list their course selections on the Application for Admission. New courses are reviewed and added each semester. If sufficient interest exists from students and institutions, a particular course will be added to our curriculum. Check the UPCES web site for the most current information.

Requirements:

UPCES encourages applications from students with proven academic abilities and a demonstrated interest in Central European studies. Both future aspirations and extra and co-curricular activities of applicants are of interest to us. Generally, the admissions committee expects a GPA level of 3.0, though students with lower GPAs may be admitted if supported strongly by their home institution. We require students to complete at least four semesters of university-level work before entering the program. Students from universities that encourage study abroad before the junior year should provide clear and compelling reasons for early application.

Application deadline: 15 May 2012 (fall semester)

15 October 2012 (spring semester)
