Ph.D. Study Programs

Postgraduate Doctoral Studies, one of the priorities of CU, train students in independent research work and provide them with the appropriate qualifications in the given academic discipline. Those who successfully complete doctoral studies, usually taking three years and culminating in a doctoral examination and the public defense of doctoral (dissertation) thesis, obtain the academic title of Doctor (Ph.D. or Th.D. – in case of the theological studies).

Entry into doctoral programs is based on submission of certificate of graduation from master's studies and an entrance examination. More specific entry requirements are determined in accordance with the law by the Dean of the faculty.

PROTESTANT THEOLOGICAL FACULTY

Charles University in Prague, Protestant Theological Faculty; Černá 9, P.O. Box 529, 115 55 Praha 1, Czech Republic; tel.: +420 221 988 216 or +420 221 988 211; fax: +420 221 988 215; E-mail: office@etf.cuni.cz; mrazek@etf.cuni.cz; Web site: <http://web.etf.cuni.cz/ETFENG-4.html>; Contact person: doc. Jiří Mrázek, Th.D.

Ph.D. Programs

The program is open to those who have graduated from a university or other institute of higher education with a master's degree in Protestant Theology (or a related discipline) and have given proof of their academic abilities. Applicants also need to have passed examinations in at least one of the languages important for European theology, other than their mother tongue (i.e. German, English, French, Italian, or Spanish).

Postgraduate doctoral studies consist of research activity leading towards a written dissertation, broadening and deepening the student's knowledge in the field of study, and mastering the techniques of academic work. The dissertation may be written in another language than Czech if there is an appropriate supervisor for that language. Students are also required to attend certain lectures, seminars or convocations, pass an examination in a second language, write various papers, reviews, or literature searches, pass three examinations in theological disciplines, and publish articles in specialist journals. The individual study plan is worked out together with the student's supervisor. Students who fulfill these requirements, and successfully submit and defend their dissertation, are awarded the title of Doctor of Theology (Th.D.) by Charles University in Prague.

Postgraduate doctoral studies (PDS) at the Protestant Theological Faculty are offered in one of the following four fields:

- Biblical Studies (comprising Old and New Testament);
- Systematic and Practical Theology (comprising dogmatics, ethics and all practical disciplines such as homiletics, catechetics, poimenics, ecumenics, etc.);
- Historical Theology and Theology of Religions (comprising church history and history of dogma, and the comparative study of religions);
- Philosophy.

Postgraduate doctoral studies can be either full-time (normally lasting three years) or part-time (normally five years).

Application procedure

Potential applicants should first contact the appropriate Head of Department (see the web site) for the field in which they wish to write their dissertation, giving details of the topic for the dissertation and the language they will study in. The Department will then consider if there is an appropriate person available to act as a supervisor. If so, and if possible in consultation with the prospective supervisor, the applicant should submit a written application including the following:

- application form
- curriculum vitae including a detailed description of theological studies undertaken so far
- certified copy of Master's degree
- if possible recommendation from a previous academic supervisor or teacher
- an outline of the proposed dissertation project, including the topic, field, methods and aim of the research (2-3 pages)

Entrance examinations then usually take place in June, consisting of an interview with members of the Faculty's Inter-Disciplinary Council for Postgraduate Studies, in which the applicant defends the outline of his or her proposed dissertation project.

Further information may be also obtained from the Vice-Dean for Research and Doctoral Studies at: mrazek@etf.cuni.cz.

The Faculty of Arts of Charles University was established in 1348. For centuries, right up to the middle of the last century, every university trained student had to graduate from it. It can be said that its history is, in a certain sense, the history of the entire university. Since being given its independence at the beginning of the past century, the Faculty Arts have been concentrating on its principal concerns - the humanities. Today, the Faculty is one of the largest CU faculties.

Text and Event in Early Modern Europe

An Erasmus Mundus Joint Doctorate

Welcome to the TEEME website! TEEME is an international doctoral programme in early modern studies funded by the European Union. It is structured around a unique collaboration between university-based researchers in the Humanities and the cultural and creative sector in four EU countries (United Kingdom, Germany, Portugal, Czech Republic). The partnership will foster intercultural dialogue and disseminate the best research in history, literature and culture to the wider community. On these pages you will find our research profile, a description of the programme and its objectives, details of the consortium universities and the programme's associated partners, as well as information on the application process.

Anthropology

Postgraduate studies of Anthropology are realized in the fields of philosophical, historical, socio - cultural, socio - linguistic and physical anthropology. The task of the study programme is to learn the theoretical basis of the field and to master its methods and methodology of research work. The curriculum of Ph.D. students includes an exam in a living language and four compulsory exams. The concept of the study programme and the requirements of each field is determined by the department council. The study programme is organized in both the full - time and correspondence form of study.

Further information: <http://fhs.cuni.cz/FHSENG-18.html>

Environmental Studies

The objective of the doctoral program Environmental Studies is to provide the concept of sustainable development with support in the form of scientifically conducted research. An important aspect of the program is the interdisciplinary character of the defined research domains and the synergies among them. Although it is not the main goal of the study, we assume that the research outputs could be an important source of scientifically validated information for objective, relevant and qualified decision - making on environmental aspects of the economic and social development of the Czech Republic.

The conditions needed for admission into the doctoral program will be verified by an entrance examination. This examination includes:

- Debate on the proposed topic for doctoral training (dissertation project).
- For graduates in social sciences, examination of the knowledge of necessary basics in the natural sciences needed for the study of the environment.
- For graduates in natural sciences (medical, technical), examination of knowledge in the social sciences, including economics.
- Examination on English language proficiency.

Ph.D. Program (4 years)

The Center for Economic Research and Graduate Education – Economics Institute offers the program of doctoral studies in theoretical and applied economics, leading to a Ph.D. degree which has an absolute charter issued in the USA, and is fully accredited in the Czech Republic. The Ph.D. program consists of two years of coursework followed by two years of supervised dissertation research. The working language of the institution is English. CERGE-EI encourages its students to conduct part of their dissertation research at partner institutions in Western Europe and North America, as well as to participate in collaborative research projects in other countries.

Eligibility for study

Students are expected to have a good background in mathematics as well as sufficient English language skills to understand fully the study material. Undergraduate training in economics is welcomed, though not essential. Applicants are required to hold a master's degree (or its equivalent) or expect to complete their master studies by June of the calendar year when they want to start the Ph.D. program.

How to apply

Based on the decision of the admission committee in March, approximately sixty candidates (out of about hundred and fifty applicants) are invited to attend the Preparatory Semester, which is a two-month semester beginning in June/July. Performance in the economics and mathematics courses and an English exam taken during the Preparatory semester determines which students are finally admitted to the doctoral program, which typically begins the second week of September (about thirty students are usually offered admission to the program).

Application form: Online. See CERGE-EI website www.cerge-ei.cz for further details.

Application deadline: February 28, 2012

Annual tuition fee: EUR 12,000 (Most students are granted tuition waivers and stipends. No separate application is necessary)

Financial support

In the first year, students at CERGE-EI receive stipend of 11500 CZK. This amount can be increased by 1500 CZK on the basis of outstanding performance, or lowered by 3000 CZK if the student does not fulfill the academic requirements.

Stipend level rises over time, reaching 12 000 CZK in the fourth year, which is the last year when students is entitled to stipend. With the exception of first-year, first-semester students, students receiving stipend are typically required to fulfill assistantship requirements (such as a research assistantship or teaching assistantship) each month as part of their study program. Selected 3rd-5th year students are also awarded Graduate Teaching Fellowships if they teach an undergraduate economics course at any university in Central and Eastern Europe or the former Soviet Union. The total support package is reviewed each year and is set at a level that enables a single student to afford a dormitory place, eat in the student cafeterias, and cover reasonable incidental expenses in Prague. The package is neither intended nor sufficient for a student to support a family while studying at CERGE-EI.
