
Internationalisation - POINT

Financial support from the Programme of Support for Internationalisation of the Charles University (hereinafter referred to as the POINT programme) is intended for doctoral students and for CU faculties or other units.

For doctoral students, the POINT programme provides funding for short-term mobilities abroad for a maximum period of three weeks:

- participation or mobility of CU students to summer schools (with the exception of language stays)
- short-term unpaid professional student internships
- international competitions and championships
- student conferences with active participation
- representation of the CU at an international plenary related to the internationalization of the University's activities

For CU faculties or other units, the programme provides opportunities to obtain support for:

- the organisation of international summer schools and other non-curricular events organised by CU faculties or other units (in accordance with the Framework for State Aid for Research, Development and Innovation (2014/C 198/01)).

Rector's Directive

Pay attention to the current Rector's Directive No. 36/2024, as amended by Rector's Directive No. 39/2025 dated October 1, 2025 available here

Deadlines

Funding applications can be submitted twice a year (in the spring round from 1-30 April and in the autumn round from 1-30 November). The application period for the spring round of 2026 takes place from 1 to 30 April, 2026. The deadline is at 4pm.

Application Submission

Applications must be submitted electronically via the IS Věda UK electronic system (section PAS - projects and competitions) by the specified deadline. A login name (personal number) and a password to CAS are required to log in.

Competition Proposal Manual

The links to the manual, which is updated depending on the progress of modifications to IS Věda UK, are also available on the bulletin board in IS Věda UK. We recommend always working with the online version of the documents.

Important Information and Guidelines

In the spring round (applications received from 1-30 April), funding is available for activities with a start date of 1 May of that year.

For the autumn round (applications received from 1-30 November), funding is available for activities with a start date of 1 December of that year.

Short-term doctoral student mobilities:

- Students may be awarded financial support for travel, accommodation and meals. Students are not eligible to apply for a contribution towards the participation fee.
- The support allocated is earmarked, i.e. it is linked to the specific applicant, activity and implementation dates. Financial support and cannot be demanded.
- Active participation by students means active outcome or involvement in the programme (presentation of a paper).
- Priority for support is given to applicants who have not previously received support through the POINT programme.
- It is not possible to apply for funding from the CU Internationalisation Support Programme and the CU Mobility Fund for the same activity.
- The maximum amount of support allocated to students is 25,000 CZK.
- If an applicant has received financial support for the project from the CU Grant Agency and plans short-term mobility within the project, the POINT contribution cannot be claimed for such mobility. This overlapping of funding is not possible.
- After the end of the application process, the faculty prepares a nominal list of applicants for the Committee, indicating the faculty priority of each application (1 - highest priority, 2 - medium priority, 3 - lowest priority).
- Each recipient of supported mobility is required to submit a final report and a confirmation of stay. Submissions must be made online via the IS Věda UK system no later than 30 days after the end of the mobility.

The organization of international summer schools and other extracurricular events:

- Financial support for the implementation of summer schools can be requested for travel, accommodation, services, materials and personal expenses and scholarships. It is also possible to apply under "other activities" (to be defined precisely).
- The POINT programme works on the principle of "seed money", i.e. one-off or recurrent support necessary to set up a summer school or event, for a maximum of the first three years. Subsequently, it is assumed that the next three years will be economically self-sufficient, without financial support from the CU Rectorate.
- The maximum amount of support allocated to CU faculties or other units as organisers of summer schools and extra-curricular events is 50,000 CZK.
- After the end of the application process, the faculty prepares a nominal list of applicants for the Committee, indicating the faculty priority of each application (1 - highest priority, 2 - medium priority, 3 - lowest priority).
- Each researcher of a supported activity is obliged to submit an evaluation report (including an accounting and a report on the use of the funds provided). Submissions must be made online via the IS Věda UK system no later than 30 days after the end of the supported activity.
